Comments on a Voice for Educators on the Partnership for Connecticut's Governing Board

National and state AFT leaders today made the following public remarks regarding Jan Hochadel's appointment to serve as a member of the Partnership for Connecticut's governing board:

"Public-private collaborations – especially ones of this magnitude – that are dedicated to making life better for vulnerable kids are incredibly complex and meaningful work," said national AFT President Randi Weingarten. "It's so important that Jan Hochadel be on this board, not only to represent the knowledge of educators from both research and practice, but to make sure their voices are a vital part of the ambitious work ahead."

"There is much to build on from Barbara Dalio's long-standing work with leaders and members throughout Connecticut," added Weingarten, "This partnership holds great promise if it embraces collaboration and collective commitment, listens to educators, and puts students at the heart of their efforts."

"I am honored to have been selected by Governor Ned Lamont to join the governing board of the recently-formed Partnership for Connecticut," said AFT Connecticut President Jan Hochadel. "Serving alongside educators and public school advocates, legislative and non-profit leaders, philanthropists and scholars in order to help guide the organization is an extraordinary opportunity to fund our future."

"The decision to accept the appointment was not one I took lightly," added Hochadel. "It followed months of discussions with leaders of AFT Connecticut-affiliated unions representing public education professionals focused on the criteria for 'community-education partnerships' deserving of our support."

"Chief among our core principles was having stakeholders at the table to develop the plan to help young people graduate from high school and connect to career opportunities," Hochadel continued. "As a teacher myself, what I most appreciate is the opportunity to assure the voices of over 15,000 educators across Connecticut will be heard on the governing board.

"Another key factor is the relationship that many of our local union leaders have had with Barbara Dalio and her foundation over the past 10 years," added Hochadel. "Serving alongside a true booster of traditional public schools and a champion for classroom teachers is a privilege.

"While the partnership's investments will provide much-needed resources in the short term to communities struggling with poverty, our state federation remains committed to long-term solutions," Hochadel continued. "Today's students are entitled to a quality public education and philanthropy can help build bridges of access. Future generations deserve no less, and we will not let up our demand for elected leaders to enact policies that will make that possible and sustainable for years to come."
